Certainty and Procedural Consequences of Agreeing to ADR Before Arbitration

- Australian courts increasingly find agreements to negotiate in good faith or mediate disputes to be sufficiently certain
- But if there also agreement to arbitrate, can a party start litigation over whether such pre-arbitration steps are completed, or must that question go to the arbitrator?
- If the arbitrator decides it as part of the award, can that be challenged due to lack of jurisdiction, or not as this question goes to admissibility and merits?

The Three Million Dollar Story: Additional Tax on Balances Over $3 Million

The government remains resolute on reducing the tax concessions available to large superannuation balances. Whilst many may argue that $3 million is not large, the vast majority of large account balance holders and their advisers don't seem concerned about receiving lower tax concessions on their earnings. In this session you will use a series of case studies to review:

- An overview of the announced measure
- How to calculate the additional tax
- The administration and options for paying the tax
- Strategies for managing the changes
